Key business leaders and leading general counsel will take part in a debate which will first examine aspects of the Rule of Law and what business needs in order to invest. The debate will start from the basis that capital is limited and therefore competition for capital and capital allocation will necessarily include an assessment of the stability of a country and its laws, rules and regulations prior to a decision to invest in a given jurisdiction. The panel will then question, having invested, what role business has in upholding aspects of the Rule of Law? What is expected of corporates today and in the future?

Maintaining and protecting the Rule of Law is of critical concern for all nations. As domestic unrest in one nation increasingly reverberates around the world, often requiring an international response, compliance with and protection of the Rule of Law is an issue of global importance.

This session will examine the priority given to this issue in jurisdictions around the world. Crucial in this context is the ability of ordinary citizens to defend their (civil) rights against the state and other powerful entities and individuals. But who should pay the cost of access to justice? Should it be citizens, businesses or government who pay the cost, and who should determine the level and quality of legal representation?

The first half of this session will present introductory speeches from an expert panel of speakers examining the issues from different jurisdictions, whilst in the second half of the session a broader panel of experts will join the debate to stimulate wider discussion driven by moderated contributions from delegates attending.

Presented by: The Law Society of England and Wales

Anne Jellema

CEO, World Wide Web Foundation

Catherine Dixon (Chair)

Chief Executive, NHS Litigation Authority

Dr Gus Hosein

Director, Privacy International

Claude Moraes MEP

Member of the European Parliament for London

Magna Carta has been described as 'the Rule of Law in embryo' (Tom Bingham). Today, the Rule of Law is promoted at home and abroad by Western powers in support of human rights, democracy and effective market economies.

At the same time, Western governments increasingly respond to a threatening world through 'states of exception' in which normal legal principles are suspended and mass surveillance of their populations is extended.

Against this backdrop Sir Tim Berners-Lee, inventor of the world wide web, has called for a digital Magna Carta – a digital bill of rights in each country, supported by public institutions, government officials and corporations.

This panel of experts will explore Sir Tim's call for a digital Magna Carta, how it might impact on business in the 21st century, and the implications for multi-jurisdictional co-operation.

Monday, 23 February 14.45 – 15.45

▶ Money Laundering: the legal services connection – Panel session

Featuring Silver Partner, Rliance

Brian Rogers
Director of Regulation & Compliance Services, Rliance

Steve Wilmott
Director of Intelligence and Investigation, Solicitors Regulation Authority

In its 2013 report, 'Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing Vulnerabilities of Legal Professionals', The Financial Action Task Force (FATF) warned that criminals sought out the involvement of legal professionals in their money laundering and terrorist funding activities, sometimes because a legal professional is required to complete certain transactions, and sometimes to access specialised legal and notarial skills and services, which could assist the laundering of the proceeds of crime and the funding of terrorism. In September 2014, the Solicitors Regulation Authority announced that it was to start a thematic review of anti-money laundering compliance within law firms in England & Wales. Around 500 high risk firms under SRA Regulatory Management (300) and those subject to a forensic investigation (200) will be visited.

It is imperative that law firms adopt effective anti-money laundering procedures so they and their staff don't become part of the money laundering problem! This session will look at some of the issues legal professionals need to consider so they don't get caught up in money laundering.

Monday, 23 February 14.45 – 15.45

▶ The role of private equity globally: a force for good? – Panel session

Presented by: Travers Smith

Chris Hale
Senior Partner, Travers Smith

Senior figures from the world of private equity will explore its role in today's global and dynamic world of business.

Attracting some of the brightest individuals from the corporate landscape, private equity funds have invested £trillions in many industry sectors around the world. Looking to enhance the value of those businesses and help realise their full potential, the funds provide more than just capital to industry. Private equity has grown in recent years to be a mainstay of corporate finance and of M&A activity. Despite this success, it does have its critics, some vocal.

This lively session will address three main areas: private equity performance, governance and the role of law in supporting, and sometimes hindering, private equity.

Monday, 23 February 16.30 – 17.45

Part 1(a) Plenary

▶ INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS DISPUTES: RESOLUTION IN THE ROLLS BUILDING (SPECIALIST BUSINESS COURTS IN LONDON)

The Hon. Mrs Justice Carr
Justice of the High Court of England & Wales (Chair)

The Rt Hon the Lord Mance

London and litigation are words that have been synonymous for many years, with London held in high regard as the pre-eminent centre for international dispute resolution. Two and a half years ago the opening of “The Rolls Building”, a specialist business court in London, cemented this position, attracting ever-increasing levels of commercial litigation and becoming the largest centre for international dispute resolution globally.

The event will start with an international panel, chaired by a High Court Judge, offering insight from the Judiciary as to why London is now the jurisdiction of choice for commercial dispute resolution. This plenary session will be between 15.00 and 15.45.

This will be followed between 15.45 and 13.00 by three break-out sessions run by the Specialist Bar Associations who call The Rolls Building home: COMBAR (Commercial Bar Association), TECBAR (Technology and Construction Bar Association) and the Chancery Bar Association. During these break-out sessions some of our leading Judges and Queen’s Counsel will use mock applications to show the advantages of the English legal system in action. Delegates can choose which of the three break-out sessions they wish to attend.

Between 13.00 and 18.30 all delegates attending this event with the Specialist Bar Associations will have a choice of tea in Lincoln’s Inn, attending Choral Evensong in the Temple Church, or participating in a tour of the Royal Courts of Justice.

This will be followed by a Champagne Reception in the Middle Temple Hall from 18.30 to 20.30 hosted by the Specialist Bar Associations and their members.

Professor Christopher Yukins
Lynn David Research Professor in Government Procurement Law,
The George Washington University
(Opening presentation)

Michael Bowsher QC
England & Wales (Moderator)

Alistair Clark QC

Michael Humphreys QC

Presented by: The Bar Council

In order to meet its social and economic goals, the state must not only promote the creation of resources and raise funds from those resources. The state must then ensure that those resources are used in a manner that efficiently and effectively develops its social and political goals, while also ensuring that there is protection against the inevitable threats that those resources will be squandered, misused or diverted. An effective procurement law system must provide for appropriate development, yet also maintain standards of integrity.

This session will consider the diverse approaches taken in worldwide procurement regulation in balancing the promotion of integrity in public purchasing with the state's social and other goals.

The session will look at the worldwide challenges and compare the effects of regulatory achievements and failings in jurisdictions that have had procurement regimes for some time (such as the US and EU) with areas where procurement regulation is newer and perhaps more innovative. A comparison with the UK experience will then be drawn. The UK had little tradition of procurement regulation until accession to the EU and the speakers will consider how this regulatory environment was integrated into the legal order, and how far it has affected the standards of public procurement. The speakers from each of the home UK Bars will look in particular at the effect of the judicial system upon public expenditure and the legality of that expenditure.

Tuesday, 24 February 9.00 – 10.00

The international litigators' view on where to fight your legal battles – and how you get there.

Choosing where to fight your legal battles really matters. In international contracts, parties negotiate more fiercely than ever about where and how disputes are to be resolved – and drafting gets ever more complex. What factors influence commercial parties? Are they the right ones, and are traditions changing? Leading A&O litigators from different countries will look at the trends, at the impact of legal developments on party choice, at regional developments and at potential risks of “privatising” the Rule of Law. They will test each other – and you – on where you should fight your international business disputes and the factors that should really matter.

Tuesday, 24 February 11.15 – 12.30

Presented by: Richard Susskind OBE

Richard Susskind OBE

Thomson Reuters

David Morley
Worldwide Senior Partner
Allen & Overy

Chris Osborne
Senior Managing Director,
FTI Consulting

Drawing on themes from his forthcoming book, Beyond the Professions (co-author, Daniel Susskind), Richard Susskind will argue that the practice of law and the administration of justice will change more radically over the next decade than in the last century. Explaining and building on advances in artificial intelligence, social networking, and robotics, he will predict the widespread use of Internet-based legal diagnostic tools, tele-lawyering, online dispute resolution, and virtual hearings. He will suggest that the emergence of new ways of sharing legal expertise in society and the replacement of many legal jobs by machine will require us to rethink the scope and nature of the legal profession.

Tuesday, 24 February 12.30 – 13.45

► The trial of Penn and Mead – lunchtime series session

Presented by
Nigel Pascoe QC

In one of the most famous of all jury trials, The Trial of Penn and Mead tells the dramatic story of two articulate Quakers on trial at the Old Bailey in 1670 for unlawful assembly, after their open meeting in the City had been interrupted. The speeches, particularly of Penn, are magnificent and the play has strong resonances for all who care about Trial by Jury. The trial led directly to the absolute independence of the jury to decide without fear of consequences.

Since 1993, Nigel Pascoe has presented this play as a solo performance over 95 times, including in American and New Zealand, at the Edinburgh Fringe and on at least 6 previous occasions at the Royal Courts of Justice, including in front of HRH The Princess Royal. It has become a celebrated and popular performance.

The US-UK Extradition Treaty 2003: Balanced or Imbalanced? – Panel session

Presented by: American Bar Association Section of International Law

Lord David Hacking
Chartered Arbitrator,
Littleton Chambers

Clive Nicholls QC
Barrister, Three Raymond
Buildings

Bruce C. Swartz
Deputy Assistant Attorney
General, U.S. Department of Justice

The Rt Hon Sir Scott Baker
Judge of the English Court
of Appeal

Edward Fitzgerald QC
Barrister, Doughty Street
Chambers

Since the USA-UK Extradition Treaty of 2003 there have been several high profile requests for extradition to the USA of UK citizens. One concerned three London-based employees of the NatWest Bank (the ‘NatWest Three’); another concerned Gary McKinnon, a UK citizen who succeeded in hacking into the Pentagon allegedly causing the disabling of a substantial US Navy computer; and a third case concerned an English citizen (Tappin) who was charged with offences arising out of an alleged conspiracy to export controlled defence articles to Iran without the required licence.

Each of these cases has brought about considerable controversy and hostility in the British press. Moreover it has been asserted by English defence lawyers that the Treaty is “imbalanced” – permitting the USA to make an extradition request on the grounds of a “reasonable suspicion” that an offence had taken place while the UK is only permitted to make an extradition request on a “probable cause” basis. Panellists will debate this assertion from the perspective of the rule of law and reflect on the Review of the 2003 Treaty in which former Lord Justice of Appeal in the UK, Sir Scott Baker, concluded that there was no imbalance relating to extradition requests between the USA and the UK.

Law firm partners and barristers have very distinct needs, earning patterns, lifestyle expectations and compliance obligations. Running busy practices, they spend their time serving clients and running the business but as a result they have less time to focus on themselves. With the global economy remaining a volatile place, where are the best opportunities for them to invest their money? How should they approach financial planning? Transparency in cost is frequently an issue, so what are the questions they should be asking when considering engaging a professional adviser? How should they measure value? This panel session will discuss the issues and provide practical ideas for how a busy law professional should approach investing in 2015 and beyond.

Leading representatives of the media, the previous regulator, and the founder of the UK's leading independent board-level communications consultancy will debate all.

Activist investors are having a profound impact on corporate America. The amount of capital allocated to hedge funds with strategies defined by shareholder activism has rocketed in the past decade, up from $19bn to $246bn.

In the UK we have already seen increased levels of shareholder activism and the activist movement looks set to grow. Despite the important legal and regulatory differences between the US and Europe, the US can offer valuable lessons in how activists have worked and how corporations have responded.

Will shareholder activism take off in Europe, as it has done in the US? What lessons can directors of European companies learn from their US counterparts in how to manage the shareholder activist? What is the attitude of institutional shareholders to this trend?

This session will leave you better informed on how activism might have an impact on you, whatever your particular vantage point on this issue might be.

The Bingham Centre for the Rule of Law has recently worked with the EIU, The Investment Treaty Forum and Hogan Lovells to survey leading multi-nationals on how their investment decisions are driven by rule of law factors.

Led by the Bingham Centre's Director, Sir Jeffrey Jowell QC, this session will draw on this research to consider how Rule of Law drives economic growth. The expert panel will explain how business and political leaders, supported by first class legal services, can work together in the 21st Century to break down economic barriers created by inadequate Rule of Law, just as their predecessors did in the 20th Century to break down the barriers of tariffs and quotas.
